

Universities thoughts on the IB

‘They love the IB.....If US universities were designing a secondary school curriculum it would look a heck of a lot like the IB. I think that they think it is the best system in the whole world, it’s just really, really hard....they have lots of respect for it.’

Lisa Montgomery, Director of Edvice, Premier US College Counselling

‘ I am delighted to read that all your students study the IB. This is an excellent qualification – I wish all my students would come with it! It provides an education, rather than just very good knowledge in three areas.’

Dr Mike Dobson FSA, Director, University of Exeter

‘Because the IB differentiates better than A-level, if we are hesitating about making an offer at all, we would be more likely to make an offer to an IB student than an A-level student.’

Dr Geoff Parks , Former Director of Admissions, Cambridge

‘In its depth, the IB is excellent preparation for degree study. In its breadth it creates the opportunity to take advantage of the wider learning a university can offer. In its vision, the IB gives young people a head start on life.

The IB’s depth and educational vision is perfect preparation for the multifaceted world of 21st century Britain.’

Paul Teulon, Director of Admissions, KCL

‘More schools should adopt the International Baccalaureate instead of A-levels to tackle the UK’s engineering skills shortage’

Naomi Climer, President, IET, 2016

‘Again, we find that the educational vision of the International Baccalaureate is shedding new light on what a good education is about.’

Pearson Report, 2014

‘The IB is well known to us for excellent preparations. Success in an IB program correlates well with success at Harvard.’

Marilyn McGrath Lewis, Director of Undergraduate Admission, Harvard

‘Our academic departments have noted the excellent preparation the IB provides for university study, and we value the breadth and depth of study that it offers.’

Admissions Office, Durham University
